ATLANTA, July 6, 2016—Atlantic Trust, the U.S. private wealth management division of CIBC (NYSE: CM) (TSX: CM), today announced that Chief Fiduciary Officer Gabrielle D. "Gaby" Bailey has been named one of the "50 Most Influential Women in Private Wealth" in the United States by Private Asset Management (PAM) magazine.

"We are very proud of Gaby's leadership and her many accomplishments in the private wealth industry," said John S. "Jack" Markwalter Jr., chairman and CEO of Atlantic Trust. "It is a great honor for Gaby to be included on this exclusive, industry-recognized list."

PAM is a leading industry publication covering the wealth management and family office industry. The 50 women selected for this honor were chosen based on a combination of peer recommendations, the level of responsibility they hold in their current and previous roles, and other significant impacts they have had on the industry through public speaking, receiving industry-recognized awards or actively encouraging equality in the workplace.

"I am deeply honored and grateful to be included on this year's list," Bailey said. "I am fortunate to work with an incredibly talented team of wealth strategies professionals at Atlantic Trust and to share this recognition with them."

Bailey has been with Atlantic Trust since 2003. As chief fiduciary officer for Atlantic Trust, she oversees the firm's fiduciary activities and serves as head of the Trust Committee. In addition, she leads the growth of Atlantic Trust's Delaware offering by engaging with estate planning professionals around the country and working with relationship teams to provide highly customized fiduciary and custody services for trusts administered under Delaware law.
